

Embassy of the United States of America Consular Section Amman, Jordan

How to File an Immigrant Petition at this Embassy

The United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) has sole authority under U.S. law to approve immigrant petitions. As there is no USCIS representation in Jordan, for more information on how to file with the USCIS, please contact your local USCIS office in the U.S. or visit www.uscis.gov. Under certain circumstances, this petition approval authority is delegated to the Embassy. One of these circumstances is that the petitioner must be a United States citizen. In addition, the petitioner must be a resident of this consular district (Jordan and Iraq).* Residents are persons who have the legal right to live in the consular district and whose principal, actual place of residence has been in Jordan or Iraq for at least one year.

Any petition (I-130) which is not completely and properly filled out or which is not accompanied by the necessary documents will be returned without action.

Submitting a petition to the Embassy gives a consular officer the authority to approve the petition. If the consular officer decides that the case is not clearly approvable, the Embassy must forward the petition to USCIS Athens for further processing. This may take six months or more. Any decision to forward a petition to USCIS Athens is final.

If your petition is approved:

All correspondence related to your petition will be sent to the address listed for the beneficiary on the I-130 petition, unless another address is specified in writing. Please ensure that the address you provide is clear and complete. The petitioner is responsible for the accuracy of all information provided.

Requirements for filing any petition

• All petitioners must schedule an appointment. To do so send an e-mail to I-130apptsamman@state.gov, or fax the Immigrant Visa Unit a request at 590-6152. Appointments to file petitions at the Embassy are given on a first come, first served basis. Due to the heavy demand for appointments and the volume of requests to reschedule, unfortunately we do not have the capacity to accommodate requests for earlier appointments. No appointment is required to file a petition with the USCIS in the U.S.

- The petitioner and beneficiary should have a legitimate existing relationship when requesting the appointment. For example, if filing for a spouse, the couple must already be married and have a marriage certificate.

Final note:

The decision to hire an attorney or consultant is entirely up to the applicant. Procedures for submitting a petition and applying for a visa can be completed without assistance following the instructions provided. However, if applicants prefer to use outside assistance, that is their choice. There are many legitimate immigration consultants and attorneys assisting applicants for reasonable fees.

^{*} The Embassy may waive this requirement only in cases which involve clear and compelling humanitarian circumstances. The burden is upon the petitioner to provide convincing evidence that such circumstances exist. The discretion to review such cases lies with the Embassy.
